3 Defendants, by and through the undersigned, hereby move 4 the Court to Dismiss the Complaint, or, in the alternative, for 5 Summary Judgment, pursuant to Rule 12(b)(6) and Rule 56, Federal

7 Plaintiffs failed to state a claim upon which relief may be 8 granted; that there are no genuine issues as to any material
9 facts, and the defendants are entitled to judgment as a matter 10 of law.

I. MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORITIES

PRELIMINARY STATEMENT

In support of the instant motion to dismiss or in the alternative for summary judgment, defendants are filing two separate memorandums of points and authorities. Defendants hereby incorporate the separate memorandum of points and authorities which is filed this date and respectfully ask the Court to consider both memorandums in ruling upon the motion.

As more fully discussed infra, courts have consistently recognized that the public interest in prompt and complete criminal investigations militates strongly against interfering with Grand Jury investigations. Thus, because of its very nature, and the authorities cited herein, plaintiffs' complaint should be dismissed or in the alternative, summary judgment should be granted against plaintiffs.

II. THIS COURT SHOULD NOT ENJOIN THE PRESENTATION OF EVIDENCE TO A GRAND JURY, PARTICULARLY WHERE PLAINTIFFS CLEARLY HAVE AN ADEQUATE REMEDY AT LAW AND WILL NOT SUFFER IRREPARABLE INJURY IF THE INJUNCTION IS DENIED

A. Courts Should Not Enjoin The Presentation Of Evidence To A Grand Jury

It is a basic and well-settled doctrine of equity jurisprudence that courts of equity should not act, particularly with respect to enjoining a criminal investigation or proceeding, where the moving party has an adequate remedy at law and will not suffer irreparable injury if equitable relief is denied. O'Shea v. Littleton, 414 U.S. 488, 94 S.C. 669 (1974); GM Leasing Corp.

1 et al v. United States, ___ U.S. ___ #75-235 (January 12, 1977); 2 Steiner v. Hocke, 272 F.2d 384 (9th Cir. 1960); Commonwealth of 3 Pennsylvania v. Powers, 311 F.Supp. 1219 (E.D. Pa. 1970); Rosa v.
4 Gil, 309 F.Supp. 1332 (P.R. 1969).

5 This historical limitation on the Courts' equity powers with 6 respect to enjoining criminal proceedings stems in part from the 7 existence of the grand jury and its all-important role in the 8 criminal process. Recently, the Supreme Court reaffirmed the 9 broad powers of the grand jury by observing:

10 "Traditionally the grand jury has been 11 accorded wide latitude to inquire into vio-
12 lations of criminal law. No judge presides 13 to monitor proceedings. It deliberates in 14 secret and may determine alone the course of 15 its inquiry. The grand jury may compel the 16 production of evidence or the testimony of 17 witnesses as it considers appropriate, and 18 its operation generally is unrestrained by 19 the technical procedural and evidentiary
20 rules governing the conduct of criminal
21 trials. 'It is a grand inquest, a body
22 with powers of investigation and inquisi-
23 tion, the scope of whose inquiries is not 24 to be limited narrowly by questions of 25 propriety or forecasts of the probable
26 result of the investigation, or by doubts 27 whether any particular individual will be 28 found properly subject to an accusation

1 of crime.' Blair v. United States, 250 U.S.
2 273, 282 (1919)."
3 United States v. Calandra, 414 U.S. 338, 343
4 (1973); see also, United States v. Dionisio,
5 410 U. S. 18 (1973).

6 Similarly, in United States v. Cox, 342 F.2d 167, 175 (5th 7 Cir. 1965), the Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit recognized 8 the importance of the grand jury's function, as well as its 9 unfettered right to investigate possible violations of law. In 10 so doing, the Court in United States v. Cox, supra, quoted from 11 In Re Grand Jury Proceedings, 4 F.Supp. 283, 84 (E.D. Pa. 1939), 12 and held:

13 "The inquisitorial power of the grand 14 jury is the most valuable function which 15 it possesses today and, far more than any 16 supposed protection which it gives to the 17 accused, justifies its survival as an 18 institution. As an engine of discovery
19 against organized and far-reaching crime, 20 it has no counterpart. Policy emphatically 21 forbids that there should be any curtailment
22 of it except in the clearest cases." (342 F.2d 23 167, 175) See also, Nixon v. Sirica, 487 F.2d 24 700, 712-713 (D.C. Cir. 1973).

25 Because of the compelling public interest in a complete 26 investigation of possible criminal violations and full disclosure 27 of facts in that regard, courts have ruled that the grand jury 28 should not be inhibited by technical rules of evidence. United

1 States v. Calandra, supra; Blair v. United States, 250 U.S. 281
2 (1919), and that illegally obtained evidence can be considered by 3 the grand jury. Stone v. Powell, ___ U.S. ___, 96 S.Ct. 3037
4 (1976); United States v. Calandra, supra. Similarly the grand 5 jury can consider information was obtained in violation of a 6 defendant's constitutional privilege against self-incrimination.
7 United States v. Calandra, supra; Lawn v. United States, 355 U.S.
8 339 (1958).

9 For the same reasons, involving a compelling public interest,
10 the Supreme Court has repeatedly recognized that grand jury pro-11 ceedings should not be interrupted. United States v. Calandra, 12 supra; United States v. Dionisio, supra; Gelbard v. United States, 13 408 U.S. 41, 70 (1972), and that courts should not enjoin criminal 14 proceedings. Stefanelli v. Minard, 342 U.S. 117 (1951); Douglas 15 v. City of Jeanette, 319 U.S. 157 (1943). See also: Replay v.
16 Stidd, 308 F.Supp. 854 (D. Minn. 1970). This fundamental pro-
17 hibition regarding the exercise of equity jurisdiction to enjoin 18 a criminal prosecution applies to cases in which prosecution is 19 anticipated, as well as to cases where prosecution is already 20 underway. Ackerman v. International Longshoreman's and Ware-
21 housemen's Union, 187 F.2d 860 (9th Cir. 1951), cert. denied, 342
22 U.S. 859.

23 The importance of an uninterrupted grand jury investigation 24 was underscored in United States v. Calandra, supra, where the 25 Supreme Court ruled that the exclusionary rule did not apply to 26 grand jury proceedings. The court reasoned:

27 "Permitting witnesses to invoke the 28 exclusionary rule before a grand jury would

1 precipitate adjudication of issues hitherto 2 reserved for the trial on the merits and would 3 delay and disrupt grand jury proceedings.

4 Suppression hearings would halt the orderly 5 progress of an investigation and might 6 necessitate extended litigation of issues only 7 tangentially related to the grand jury's 8 primary objective. The probable result would 9 be protracted interruption of grand jury pro-10 ceedings. Gelbard v. United States, 408 U.S.

11 41, 70 (1972) (White, J., concurring), effectively 12 transforming them into preliminary trials on 13 the merits. In some cases the delay might be 14 fatal to the enforcement of the criminal law.
15 Just last Term we reaffirmed our disinclination
16 to allow litigious interference with grand 17 jury proceedings:

18 'Any holding that would saddle a 19 grand jury with minitrials and preliminary 20 showings would assuredly impede its 21 investigation and frustrate the public's 22 interest in the fair and expeditious
23 administration of the criminal laws'

24 United States v. Dionisio, 410 U.S. 1, 25 17 (1973).

26 Cf. United States v. Ryan, 402 U.S. 530 (1971);

27 Cobbledick v. United States, 300 U.S. 323 (1940).

1 In sum, we believe that allowing a grand jury 2 witness to invoke the exclusionary rule would 3 unduly interfere with the effective and 4 expeditious discharge of the grand jury's 5 duties."

6 United States v. Calandra, 414 U.S. 338, 349-50 (footnotes 7 omitted).

8 In addition to the established proscription against enjoining
9 criminal prosecution, it is equally well-settled that courts
10 should not interfere with government attorneys who exercise 11 control over criminal investigations and prosecutions. In 12 United States v. Cox, supra, the court ruled that:

13 " . . . the attorney for the United 14 States . . . exercises a discretion as to 15 whether or not there shall be a prosecution 16 in a particular case. It follows, as an 17 incident of the constitutional separation
18 of powers, that the courts are not to inter-19 fere with the free exercise of the dis-20 cretionary powers of the attorneys of the 21 United States in their control over criminal 22 prosecutions." 342 F.2d 167, 171 (footnote
23 omitted). [Emphasis supplied]

24 Moreover, the Ninth Circuit has recently reaffirmed the 25 principle that courts should not enjoin government attorneys from 26 presenting evidence to a grand jury which is investigating possible
27 criminal violations. Midwest Growers Co-op Corp. v. Kirkemo, 553
28 F.2d 455 (9th Cir. 1976). In that case Midwest Growers sought

1 damages and injunctive relief against the I.C.C., the United 2 States of America and various individuals including, among others,
3 the United States Attorney and two Assistant United States Attorneys 4 for this district based on an illegal search of plaintiff's
5 premises. Specifically, the plaintiff sought in part to enjoin 6 the United States of America, its agents and employees from using 7 evidence obtained from the search in any criminal or civil 8 proceeding. The district court dismissed the plaintiff's claims 9 as to the United States of America and the I.C.C. but granted a 10 permanent injunction regarding the use of information derived 11 from the search. On appeal, this Circuit ruled, in part, that 12 the district court properly dismissed the claims against the 13 United States of America and the Interstate Commerce Commission, 14 but the court went on to hold that the permanent injunction 15 against the defendants was improper and should be dissolved. The 16 court concluded that the injunction was "overly broad, premature, 17 and legally improper." (553 F.2d 455, 466). In so ruling, the 18 Court opined:

19 " . . . we question the propriety of 20 enjoining the individual defendants from 21 making any use of the information obtained 22 through their search of Midwest's office.
23 In the first place, plaintiff has failed 24 to show either irreparable harm or lack of 25 any adequate remedy at law -- both pre-
26 requisites to injunctive relief. Rondeau
27 v. Mosinee Paper Corp., 422 U.S. 49, 57, 95
28 S.Ct. 2069, 2075, 45 L.Ed.2d 12, 20 (1975).

1 "In the second place, it is impossible
2 to determine now what, if any, use the de-3 fendants will make of the materials and 4 information obtained in their search. In 5 any future action in which the defendants 6 may seek to use the material, the court may 7 properly consider Midwest's motion to 8 suppress, and whether the search was in vio-
9 lation of the Fourth Amendment. This 10 remedy is adequate to redress whatever 11 abuses may have occurred in the search.

12 "Moreover, there may be contexts in 13 which the evidence obtained from Midwest
14 could be admitted despite the illegality
15 of the search

16 " . . . Since it is impossible to predict 17 what future use may be made of this evidence an 18 injunction against all use at this time is 19 premature and improper." (553 F.2d 455, 465-66).

20 [Emphasis added]

21 That courts have been loathe to interfere with the orderly 22 and expeditious discharge of the grand jury's duties is apparent 23 from the case law. For example in United States v. United 24 States District Court for the Southern District of West Virginia, 25 238 F.2d 713 (4th Cir. 1956), an application was made by the 26 United States for a writ of mandamus directing the judge of the 27 United States District Court for the Southern District of West 28 Virginia to vacate an order which, inter alia, precluded the

1 grand jury from completing an anti-trust investigation of the 2 milk industry. The court of appeals, citing Blair v. United 3 States, supra, held that the action of the District Court judge:

4 "[I]nterfered unduly with the powers of the 5 grand jury and the proper functions of gover-6 ment counsel in the investigation which the 7 grand jury was conducting. In this connection 8 it must be remembered that, while a grand jury 9 is not independent of the court, it is not 10 subject to the court's directions and orders
11 with respect to the exercise of its essential 12 functions.

13 * * *

14 "While the grand jury is summoned, empaneled 15 and sworn by the court, it is essentially 16 independent of court control. As said by Judge 17 Fee in United States v. Smyth, D.C., 104 F.Supp.
18 283, 292: 'While the court may exercise an 19 influence over the proceedings, there is neither 20 a method whereby an indictment by a grand jury 21 can be pre-emptorily required, nor, on the 22 other hand, is there any method of preventing 23 the presentment of an indictment except by 24 summary discharge.' While the judge has the 25 supervisory duty to see that its process is 26 not abused or used for purposes of oppression
27 or injustice, there should be no curtailment 28 of its inquisitional power except in the

1 clearest cases of abuse." (238 F.2d 713,
2 719-722) (Citations omitted).

3 To the same effect is Application of Texas Co., 27 F.Supp.
4 847 (E.D. Ill. 1939), in which petitioners sought to enjoin the 5 Attorney General and the United States Attorney and their assistants
6 from presenting certain evidence to a grand jury. The court 7 denied the application and declared:

8 "A grand jury is a part of the court machinery, 9 an all-important element in the agency of the 10 government endowed with judicial power, for 11 one accused of felony may not be prosecuted 12 except upon a true bill returned by a grand 13 jury. It is under control by the court to the 14 extent that it is organized and the legality 15 of its proceedings determined by the court in 16 accordance with the statutes. Its members 17 are subject to the court's supervision and 18 control for any violation of their duties.
19 Beyond this supervisory power over them, 20 however, the court cannot limit them in their 21 legitimate investigation of alleged violations
22 of the law." (27 F.Supp. 847, 850) [Emphasis
23 supplied].

24 In Chakejian v. Trout, 295 F.Supp. 97 (E.D. Pa. 1969), the 25 taxpayer sought to enjoin enforcement of an I.R.S. summons and to 26 enjoin presentation of evidence obtained by the I.R.S. to the 27 grand jury. The court held that the plaintiff was not entitled 28 to injunctive relief since he had an adequate remedy at law

1 (i.e., a motion to suppress), quoting from United States v. Blue, 2 384 U.S. 251, 255 (1966) to the effect that cases ordering 3 exclusion of illegally obtained evidence "assume implicitly that 4 the remedy does not extend to barring the prosecution altogether."
5 Chakejian v. Trout, supra, at 102-103. See In re April 1956 Term 6 Grand Jury, 239 F.2d 263, 270-271 (7th Cir. 1956).

7 In United States v. Blue, supra, where petitioner sought 8 dismissal of the indictment prior to trial, the Court held:

9 "Even if we assume that the Government did 10 acquire incriminating evidence in violation 11 of the Fifth Amendment, [petitioner] would 12 at most be entitled to suppress the evidence 13 and its fruits if they were sought to be used 14 against him at trial.

15 * * * * *

16 "Our numerous precedents ordering the 17 exclusion of such illegally obtained evi-
18 dence assume implicitly that the remedy
19 does not extend to barring the prosecution
20 altogether. So drastic a step might advance
21 marginally some of the ends served by ex-22 clusionary rules, but it would also increase 23 to an intolerable degree interference with 24 the public interest in having the guilty
25 brought to book. (384 U.S. at 255) (Emphasis 26 supplied).

27 Thus it is apparent from the cases in this and other circuits,
28 as well as the decisions of the Supreme Court, that this court

1 should not enjoin the defendants from presenting evidence to a 2 grand jury or otherwise using such evidence in a civil or criminal 3 proceeding.

4 B. The Plaintiffs Have Failed To Make Any Showing Of 5 Irreparable Injury

6 An injunction is a drastic remedy, and as the cases discussed 7 hereafter show, courts have, therefore, carefully imposed strict 8 requisites which plaintiff must allege and establish to show 9 entitlement to an injunction.

10 Two such requisites are threat of immediate irreparable 11 injury to the plaintiff and lack of adequate remedy at law.
12 GM Leasing Corp. et al v. United States, supra; Rondeau v. Mosinee
13 Paper Corp., 422 U.S. 49 (1975); Granny Goose Foods v. Teamsters, 14 415 U.S. 423 (1974); O'Shea v. Littleton, supra; Samuels v. Mackell
15 401 U.S. 66 (1971); Wilson v. Schnettler, 365 U.S. 381 (1961); 16 Midwest Growers Co-op Corp v. Kirkemo, supra; Canal Authority of 17 State of Florida v. Callaway, 489 F.2d 567 (5th Cir. 1974).

18 The burden of persuasion as to both, immediate irreparable 19 injury and lack of adequate remedy at law, is on the party seeking 20 the injunction, and the respondent need not show lack of irreparable 21 injury or existence of adequate remedy at law. Granny Goose Foods 22 v. Teamsters, supra; Canal Authority of State of Florida v.
23 Callaway, supra.

24 Abstract, conjectural injury is not enough to warrant issuance 25 of an injunction. Plaintiff must allege and establish that he 26 has sustained or is in immediate danger of sustaining some direct, 27 specific injury as a result of the challenged conduct. O'Shea v.
28 Littleton, supra. General allegations of violations of con-

1 stitutional rights are insufficient. O'Shea v. Littleton, 2 supra; Boyle v. Landri, 401 U.S. 71 (1971).

3 Mere injury, even though it may be substantial is not 4 sufficient to form the basis for the issuance of an injunction.
5 United States v. Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, 533 F.2d 107 (3rd 6 Cir. 1976). The injury sustained must be irreparable. Santa 7 Barbara Co. v. Hickel, 426 F.2d 164 (9th Cir. 1970), cert.
8 denied, 400 U.S. 999.

9 Even the costs, anxiety and inconvenience of having to 10 defend against a criminal prosecution cannot in itself be considered 11 "irreparable injury", Younger v. Harris, 401 U.S. 37 (1971);
12 Renegotiation Board v. Bannercraft Clothing Co., Inc., 415 U.S. 1
13 (1974). Furthermore, where adequate remedy at law exists, there 14 is no irreparable injury even where party seeking the injunction 15 is alleging violation of constitutional rights. O'Shea v.
16 Littleton, supra; Samuels v. Mackell, supra.

17 Plaintiffs in the case at bar fail to show any harm whatso-18 ever, much less irreparable harm which is the prerequisite for 19 the issuance of the injunction they seek. In an attempt to 20 bolster their unsupported claims of injury, plaintiffs vaguely 21 assert that their rights to indictment and trial by impartial 22 jurors have been impaired and have "possibly" been destroyed.
23 Such a nebulous and conclusory claim is nothing more than mere 24 conjecture and cannot constitute "irreparable injury". O'Shea 25 v. Littleton, supra.

26 Similarly, plaintiffs' claims that they have been subjected 27 to increased costs of litigation in civil actions and may have to 28 /

1 defend a criminal action, pale in comparison to the required
2 showing of irreparable harm. Younger v. Harris, supra.

3 Moreover, plaintiffs spuriously infer that irreparable harm 4 will result when and if the defendants present certain alleged 5 evidence unlawfully obtained to the Grand Jury. Assuming, without 6 conceding that evidence was unlawfully obtained and assuming 7 arguendo plaintiffs had standing to contest the legality of such 8 evidence, Plaintiffs' claim must fail as a matter of law.

9 United States v. Calandra, supra; Midwest Growers Co-op Corp. v.
10 Kirkemo, supra. This argument was addressed by the Ninth Circuit 11 in Midwest Growers, supra, where the court rejected the same 12 claim which is now raised by plaintiffs by ruling:

13 " . . . there may be contexts in which 14 the evidence obtained from Midwest could be 15 admitted despite the illegality of the search.
16 As the Supreme Court noted in United States v.
17 Calandra, 414 U.S. 338, 348, 94 S.Ct. 613, 620,
18 38 L.Ed.2d 561 571 (1974): 'The exclusionary 19 rule has never been interpreted to proscribe the 20 use of illegally seized evidence in all pro-
21 ceedings or against all persons.' When evidence 22 is sought to be suppressed the court must con-23 sider the purpose of the rule -- to discourage 24 unlawful conduct by government agents -- and the 25 nature of the proceeding involved. In performing 26 such a balancing test the Seventh Circuit
27 recently held in Honeycutt v. Aetna Insurance 28 Co., 510 F.2d 340, 348 (1975), cert. denied,

1 There the court held that plaintiff had an adequate remedy at law 2 by filing a motion to suppress in the criminal case. In that 3 regard this Circuit held:

4 " . . . In any future action in which the 5 defendants may seek to use the material, the 6 court may properly consider Midwest's motion 7 to suppress, and whether the search was in 8 violation of the Fourth Amendment. This remedy 9 is adequate to redress whatever abuses may have 10 occurred in the search."

11 (533 F.2d 455, 466) [Emphasis supplied]
12 United States v. Calandra, supra. See also, Witte v. United 13 States, ___ F.2d ___ #76-3061 (9th Cir. October 26, 1976); United 14 States v. Blue, supra.

15 It is manifest that issues raised by plaintiffs in the 16 instant case such as lawfulness of the court's actions and other 17 constitutional claims can be determined as readily in a criminal 18 case as in a suit for injunctive relief. Douglas v. City of 19 Jeanette, supra; Wallach v. City of Pagendale, 376 F.2d 671 (8th 20 Cir. 1967).

21 Therefore, assuming arguendo that unlawful acts occurred in 22 this case, it is obvious that plaintiffs have a proper forum to 23 litigate such issues, namely by motion to suppress if and when a 24 criminal charge is made. Since an adequate remedy at law is 25 available there is no irreparable harm to the plaintiffs and it 26 is axiomatic that an injunction will not lie.

1 III PLAINTIFFS HAVE NO STANDING TO ENJOIN THE PRESENTATION OF 2 EVIDENCE TO THE GRAND JURY OR TO COMPLAIN OF THE 3 INVESTIGATION OF SPECIAL COUNSEL

4 Plaintiffs in the instant case have no standing to prevent 5 witnesses from appearing before the grand jury or to prevent the 6 grand jury from receiving evidence from any source whatsoever.
7 It is also apparent that plaintiffs have no standing to complain
8 of the investigation conducted by Special Counsel.

9 As discussed more fully supra, it is now settled that the 10 exclusionary rule does not apply to grand jury proceedings and 11 that the grand jury can receive evidence which may have been 12 illegally obtained.^{1/} Stone v. Powell, supra; United States v.
13 Calandra, supra; Midwest Growers Co-op v. Kirkemo, supra. There-14 fore, neither a witness before a grand jury nor a third party can 15 enjoin the presentation of evidence to a grand jury on the basis 16 that such evidence was illegally obtained. United States v. Miller 17 ___ U.S ___ (1976); Stone v. Powell, supra; United States v.
18 Calandra, supra; In re Vigorito, 499 F.2d 1351 (2d Cir. 1974), 19 cert. denied,; Vigorito v. United States, 419 U.S. 1056.

20 This principle was recognized by the Second Circuit in 21 In Re Vigorito, supra, where it held:

22 " . . . we note that the exclusionary 23 rule . . . does not give the appellees the 24 right to suppress the use of evidence by a
25 grand jury . . .

26 _____
27 1/ It should also be noted that the exclusionary rule does not 28 apply to civil cases. Midwest Growers Coop v. Kirkemo, supra.

1 . . . The Calandra rationale applies .
2 with equal force in a case like the present,
3 where a suppression hearing is brought by a
4 non-witness's motion. The non-witness's
5 interest in the investigation is more tenuous 6 than a witness's interest since he is not 7 subject to the court's contempt power. Giving 8 the present appellees the benefit of the 9 exclusionary rule would interfere with the 10 function of the Grand Jury . . . "

11 (499 F.2d 1351, 1353)

12 In United States v. Miller, supra, a subpoena duces tecum
13 was issued on behalf of the grand jury to a bank which subpoena 14 related to the defendant's account. The Supreme Court ruled that 15 the depositor had no reasonable expectation of privacy with 16 respect to the records kept by the bank and that he lacked standing 17 to complain of their production to the grand jury. The Court 18 reasoned:

19 "Since no Fourth Amendment interests of 20 the depositor are implicated here, this case 21 is governed by the general rule that the 22 issuance of a subpoena to a third party to 23 obtain the records of that party does not 24 violate the rights of a defendant, even if 25 a criminal prosecution is contemplated at 26 the time the subpoena is issued." (96 S.Ct.
27 16, 19, 1624). See also California Bankers
28 Association v. Shultz, 416 U.S. 21 (1974).

1 Thus, plaintiffs have no standing to prevent others from 2 appearing before the grand jury. See Application of Iaconi, 120 3 F.Supp. 589 (D. Mass. 1954). Furthermore, plaintiffs lack 4 standing to enjoin the government from acquiring information from 5 third party witnesses which may, in turn, be presented to the 6 grand jury. Howfield Inc. v. United States, 409 F.2d 694 (9th
7 Cir. 1969).

8 It is also obvious that plaintiffs have no standing to 9 complain of Special Counsel's investigation and are merely 10 attempting to assert the rights of other witnesses.

11 Although plaintiffs are quick to point out that in its 12 Second Amended Judgment, this court ordered that officers, 13 directors and controlling persons shall cooperate fully with 14 Special Counsel. They fail to make any mention of the fact that 15 in that same judgment this court stated:

16 "It is further ordered, adjudged and 17 decreed that none of the provision of this 18 Second Amended Judgment And Order shall 19 prevent the assertion of any applicable 20 constitutional or legally recognizable 21 privilege . . ." (Second Amended Judgment XIV)

22 Therefore, under the very terms of this court's order, all 23 applicable privileges were available to those who might be 24 interviewed by Special Counsel.

25 Despite the above, plaintiffs inaccurately claim that by 26 virtue of the Court's order " . . . any person connected with 27 Mattel who chose not to cooperate with Special Counsel's investi-28 gation was potentially subject to a judicial contempt order."

1 (Plaintiff's Memo of Points and Authorities, p. 17). . However, 2 such was clearly not the case.

3 Indeed when plaintiffs were interviewed by Special Counsel 4 they were advised of their constitutional rights and were at all 5 times represented by able counsel. Hence they were in no way 6 coerced to make any statement.

7 Insofar as plaintiffs seek to assert the constitutional 8 rights of other witnesses, their attempt must fail since it has 9 long been decided that one cannot assert the Fifth Amendment
10 rights of others.^{2/} Rogers v. United States, 340 U.S. 367 (1951);
11 In Re Michaelson, 511 F.2d 882 (9th Cir. 1975), cert. denied;³ 12 Michaelson v. United States, 421 U.S. 978. The Supreme Court has 13 recently held that the Fifth Amendment privilege applies to the 14 person but not to the information that may incriminate him.
15 United States v. Nobles, 422 U.S. 225 (1975). See also: 16 United States v. Howell, 470 F.2d 1064 (9th Cir. 1972); United 17 States v. Le Pera, 443 F.2d 810 (9th Cir.), cert. denied, 404
18 U.S. 958 (1971); United States v. Ciniceros, 427 F.2d 658 (9th 19 Cir. 1970).

20 _____
21 ^{2/} Plaintiffs also complain that Special Counsel had access to 22 Mattel's records, (complaint p.12). This assertion is also 23 without legal significance, not only because one cannot assert
24 another's Fifth Amendment privilege, but also because a corporation
25 has no Fifth Amendment privilege. United States v. White, 322
26 U.S. 694 (1943); Hale v. Henkel, 201 U.S. 43 (1905).

27 /

28 /

1 In Gollaher v. United States, 419 F.2d 520 (9th Cir. 1969), 2 the defendant claimed that certain government witnesses were 3 coerced into testifying before the grand jury and that the use of 4 evidence so obtained was a violation of his rights under the 5 Fourth and Fifth Amendments. This circuit rejected the defendant's 6 argument, and citing Diaz-Rosendo v. United States, 357 F.2d 124
7 (9th Cir. 1966) (en banc), stated:

8 ". . . a defendant did not have standing 9 to object to the admissibility of evidence seized 10 in violation of the rights of one other than the 11 defendant . . .

12 . . . The right of witnesses to refuse
13 to incriminate themselves is a personal right . . .
14 They can waive that right and their failure 15 to assert that right is nothing about which 16 appellants are entitled to complain." (419 F.2d 17 520, 525-26)

18 Therefore, the long standing maxim that "a party is privileged 19 from producing the evidence but not from its production" applies 20 to plaintiff's claim in the case at bar. Johnson v. United States
21 228 U.S. 457, 458 (1913).

22
23 IV. BY PLAINTIFFS' FAILURE TO ASSERT A TIMELY CLAIM, EQUITABLE 24 RELIEF IS BARRED AS A MATTER OF LAW BY LACHES

25 It is axiomatic that equity aids only the vigilant and 26 because of the drastic nature of equitable relief it has uniformly 27 been held that such relief will be sparingly granted and only to 28 those who have manifested due diligence. Mims v. Yarborough,

1 343 F.Supp. 1146 (S. Car. 1971), aff'd. 461 F.2d 1266 (4th Cir.
2 1972), cert. denied, 409 U.S. 1041; Barthelmes v. Morris, 342
3 F.Supp. 153 (D. Mc. 1972). The equitable doctrine of laches will 4 act as a separate and independent basis for barring relief as a 5 matter of law where a plaintiff sleeps on his rights and attempts 6 to assert those rights at some later time. Mims v. Yarborough, 7 supra; Citizens for Mass Transit Against Freeways v. Brinegar, 8 357 F.Supp. 1269 (D. Ariz. 1973).

9 A case in point in Quinn v. United States, 397 F.Supp. 1250
10 (D. Mass. 1975), where the court denied equitable relief holding 11 that plaintiffs were barred by laches because they waited until 12 July 1975 to institute a lawsuit challenging a military regulation 13 that was issued in February, 1974.

14 Plaintiffs in the case at bar seek drastic, equitable relief, 15 however, it is apparent on the face of their complaint that they 16 have delayed in seeking any remedy and thus equitable relief 17 should be denied as a matter of law.

18 On January 7, 1977, Plaintiffs filed the instant complaint 19 attacking for the first time the validity of an order issued by 20 this court on November 26, 1974. Plaintiffs now assert for the 21 first time that the aforementioned order has caused them "irrepara-22 ble harm", yet the order was issued more than two years ago. Plaintiffs 23 who have been represented by counsel throughout, were aware of 24 the existence of the second amended judgment at the time it was 25 issued or shortly thereafter and were also aware of its terms.
26 Indeed, Plaintiffs Ruth and Elliot Handler were board members at 27 Mattel Inc. through October, 1975, and voted for the approval of 28 the first and second judgments involving Mattel Inc. in this

1 case. Despite the above, plaintiffs did not see fit to pursue a 2 myriad of alleged constitutional violations until more than two 3 years after the issuance of the order.

4 Moreover, plaintiffs now attack for the first time the 5 appointment of a Special Counsel by Mattel Inc., which appoint-6 ment was approved by this court on January 9, 1975. Similarly, 7 plaintiffs now complain of the issuance of the Report of Special 8 Counsel and its subsequent dissemination.

9 It is apparent, however, that plaintiffs were fully aware of 10 the appointment of Special Counsel and the subsequent approval of 11 appointment by this court when it occurred. Plaintiffs who were 12 represented by counsel were interviewed by Special Counsel on 13 various occasions between May 16, 1975, and July 17, 1975, yet 14 they have omitted until approximately eighteen months later to 15 make even a threshold complaint as to Special Counsel's existence.

16 With respect to the issuance of Special Counsel's report, 17 plaintiffs argue that they have suffered continuing irreparable 18 harm, yet they concede they personally received copies of that 19 report at least three days before it was issued. Plaintiffs 20 never attempted to intervene to have the report sealed or to 21 prevent its dissemination. In short, they have chosen not to 22 assert any of their rights until fourteen months after the issuance 23 of Special Counsel's report.

24 Moreover, based in part upon the results of the Special 25 Counsel's investigation, the plaintiffs herein agreed to multi-26 million dollar settlements after being named in class actions.
27 Although the Special Counsel's appointment was made two years ago, 28 and although the plaintiffs herein paid millions of dollars in

1 settlement of lawsuits based upon facts which were disclosed by 2 the Special Counsel's investigation, and despite the fact that 3 they have been aware for at least six months of the United States 4 Attorney's investigation, they have not until the matter is 5 approaching a presentation to the grand jury attacked the Court's 6 order appointing the Special Counsel.

7 Under the equitable doctrine of laches such an egregious and 8 inexcusable delay surely bars the plaintiffs from obtaining the 9 relief they seek. Mims v. Yarborough, supra; Quinn v. United 10 States, supra.

11
12 V. CONCLUSION

13 Therefore, the complaint in this case at bar should be 14 dismissed, or in the alternative, defendant's motion for summary 15 judgment should be granted.
