Dear Mr. Goelzer –

One final (?) name for your list of members of the General Counsel's office:

When I occasionally visited the New York Regional Office in 1939-44, George S. Parlin was a lawyer who principally handled interpretive questions, particularly brokerage problems under the 1934 Act. He was blind. My understanding was that before he became blind, he had had the title of Assistant General Counsel in Washington.

He was a brother of the Parlin who was then a name partner of what is now the Cahill Gordon Reindel etc. firm in NYC.

Cordially yours,
Homer Kripke
